

The Sexist language in stand-up comedy show Infamous by Andrew Schulz

Farid Nurfauzan

English Literature Department

Faculty of Literature, Culture, and Communication

Universitas Ahmad Dahlan

Email: faridnurfauzan@gmail.com

Abstract. In this study, the researcher discusses the use of sexist language from a stand up comedian named Andrew Schulz in his special show entitled Infamous. The purpose of this study is to classify the types of sexist language used and describe the context and reasons for the language used. This study uses a qualitative descriptive research method which involves the representation of data, both verbal and written, to explain the observable behavior and phenomena. From the stand up comedy video made by Schulz, the researcher found two types of sexist language both indirect sexism and overt sexism as well as the reasons and context why the language is used. The researcher believes that it is important for society to criticize the use of sexist language even in the context of comedy or entertainment, as this is how social change can move towards a more inclusive society.

Keywords: sexist language, overt sexism, indirect sexism

Seminar on Linguistics, Literature, and Culture (SLLICE)
English Literature Department, FSBK, UAD
Vol. 1 (1), July 2024

Full version of this paper is provided by request to our administrator staff.